PIONEER WASHER.
E. G. BOLTER,
AGENT FOR OREGON AND WASHINGTON TERRITORY.
THIS CELEBRATED WASHING MACHINE IS now for the first time introduced to the Oregon public. It is unrivalled for its simplicity, durability and the rapidity and ease of its action. Washing the dirtiest clothes perfectly clean in from five to ten minutes, with but slight labor, and lasting, with proper care, for ten years. The wear and tear of clothing in washing by this machine is vastly less than by any other known process of washing. It does its work by a reverse motion in forcing the water through the clothes.
It having a tight cover, the steam thus assists materially in cleansing the clothes, and also avoids the inhaling of steam from hot suds.
This Machine captured the Special Premium at the California State Fair, and all that have used it pronounce it an invaluable adjunct to all housekeepers and families and washing men and washing women.
It has been extensively introduced throughout the State of California, and receives the universal commendation of all who have used it.
THE COUNTY RIGHTS, now unsold, will be sold at a bargain if applied for soon.

Mansion House, and of John Wilson,

J. W. Forney on the Situation.

The editor of the Philadelphia Press writes the following letter to that paper:

In all this thick and awful gloom there is but one star to light the way—General Grant is in the War Office! Our poor country, more than once dependent upon his sword, is now hanging upon his word Whatever may have been at first thought of his accepting the portfolio of the War Office, no patriot now questions the vital importance of his presence in that Department. The rebel enemy respects and fears him. The men who had filled millions of corrupt claims with Stanton, which that just and honest man refused to consider, found Grant as inflexible as the Minister whose great talents and victories he so frequently, and so recently and significantly, recognized. His favorite officers displaced, against his wishes, if not his protest, the attitude of General was never more important to his country men, or more unpleasant to himself. I have not seen him, and write rather from the views of others than from my own knowledge. But I have not met a Radical who does not speak what I have here set down, and I have met our most thoughtful and conscientious friends. The destiny of the Republic has never been more completely in the hands of General Grant than it is at the present moment.

If there is any remedy for the new peril, it is in the hands of the people. They, and they alone, can apply it. The surest way to precipitate hostilities, to encourage Andrew Johnson on to seize the Government, force the rebels into Congress, and declare the acts of emancipation and reconstruction unconstitutional, is to vote the Copperhead ticket at the coming elections. You will be told that this is a mere partisan's appeal to awaken your fears and to control your votes. Remember, I have never before deceived you in a grave public emergency. My countrymen, every honest heart is convulsed with a terrible anxiety, and I only echo your own solicitude by these frank words of warning. Even the Copperheads, terror stricken at this bad man's conduct, try to shake him off, as if to get rid of a second frightful responsibility should their efforts in supporting his policy ripen into another bloody harvest. The steps of revolution are never so rapid as when a great, free people refuse to be admonished.

You refused to be warned even in this correspondence, when, six years ago last December, I told you that the rebel foe was arming for your destruction; and it was only when the blow fell that you awoke to the dread reality. If you needed proof, not of Andrew Johnson's intentions (happily no one doubts them now), but of the fatal folly of being misled into opposition to the only party that can save the Republic, look at the paralysis that has befallen business all over the land since he has construed the elections in California and Maine into an indorsement of his plan to restore the rebels to power! What man is mad enough to attribute the rise in gold to the Reconstruction law, when hundreds of rebel leaders have accepted its terms, and the manumitted millions of the South, paid for their labor for the first time, are enriching their former masters, and quietly preparing for the duties of citizenship? The crisis is graver than any that has preceded it. There is not a tried soldier of the Republic who does not see and say that it is so. Last October you were aroused to frenzy at the bare intimation of what is now openly avowed. The notorious Ledger despatch, repudiated then because it was met by one mighty outburst of indignation (but never formally denied by its author, Andrew Johnson,) is now not only to be acted upon, but acted upon under the sanction of the Attorney General, and amid the threats of rebel agents. And the American people are not only declared to be patient in such a crisis, but said to be voting for the Copperheads, to show that the Republicans are wrong. Gold falls, business stops, credit trembles, labor stands aghast, and the monarchs of the civilized world, after admitting that we have crushed the rebellion, may now begin to rejoice over the revival of their darling hopes! And shall it be said that the great Republican party of America have contributed to such an end; that while the enemies of progress abroad and the enemies of humanity at home are plotting, with the aid of a wicked man in the Presidential chair, Republican votes helped to swell the verdict against the Right, and Republican hands helped to lift that Wrong into power.

A SEVENTY-FIVE THOUSAND DOLLAR CHECK.—The following is from the N. Y. Post of Sept, 16th:

That a bank teller should pay a check for $75,000 to an unknown man—who might have found it in the street or picked it out of the owner's pockets—seems to argue gross carelessness, but it is possible that the careless habit originated with the supposed drawer of the check.

There can be comparatively few men, even in New York, who can draw checks for such large amounts. If one of these men did business habitually in such a way and on such a scale as to accustom a bank officer to pay his checks, to whatever amount or by whomever presented, then—and then only—it seems to us, could such a circumstance occur as the payment, with little examination to a stranger, of a check for $75,000. We do not know in what way Vanderbilt transacts business. He is reported to have said once that he knew but little about a certain important transaction, because when it took place he was at whist, and he never allowed business to interfere with his whist.

The fellow who presented the check for $75,000 with Vanderbilt's name forged to it must have been familiar with the business habits of his victim; he must have ascertained beforehand that if he offered a check for that amount that it would be paid and no questions asked; and that it would not even occur to the bank to notify Vanderbilt of the check as something unusual. That, in fact, it was not an uncommon circumstance in the bank to be required to pay such large sums on single checks by Vanderbilt to strangers.

CHARACTERISTIC INDECISION.—McClellan, it was announced lately, had decided to return to America this fall. The Albany Journal says everybody was surprised by the announcement, as he was known to have had the subject under consideration only about three months. A later dispatch corrects the first announcement. Before deciding, McClellan has decided to look at the matter in all its bearings, and, with a view of determining the question in his usually cautious manner, has leased his house in Dresden for another year, during which time he will, it is supposed—if not unduly interfered with—be able to decide whether he will return or not.

On a recent moonlight excursion from Norwalk, Conn., a couple very "soft" on each other occupied a retired nook in one part of the boat. The young man, overcome by the romantic nature of his surroundings, made bold to kiss his fair companion's hand, whereat she exclaimed in a very audible tone of voice: "Laws! my hand is all dirty and sticky with peaches, and ice cream, and candy, and here you are licking it off!" The roar of laughter from the bystanders brought the young man to a realizing sense of the situation, and he suddenly left.

"RADICAL DEMOCRACY."—The editor of the Umatilla Press writes from Salem to his paper, as follows:

We find that every Democrat worth a tinker's oath, is in favor of a straight out and out policy. Webfoot is all right. Men will be appointed to on principle, not with the hope of office There will be no danger of a mule and-water platform, if true Democrats turn out to the primaries. Don't send a man to any convention who talks policy or conciliation.

DON'T LIKE TO TRUST THEM.—At a meeting of Kentuckians who served in the Union armies

MONDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 15, 1867.

What Principles?

As the Republicans have lost ground to some extent in the late elections, and as the result is claimed as a victory for Democratic principles, it becomes interesting to inquire what those "principles" are. We know what "Democracy" was in the times of Pierce and Buchanan, we know what it was down to the overthrow of the rebellion in April, 1865. In those days it held that if any State chose "to annul its grants of power to the General Government," or in other words, if any State or States chose to secede from the Union, there was no constitutional power inhering in the General Government to arrest the disintegration and preserve the national existence. That this was Democracy in Buchanan's time is a fact which there will be no attempt to controvert. Is the result of the late elections a victory for these principles? Is it a verdict for Buchanan and his party and a repudiation of the doctrine that the Union, when its integrity is assailed, may be preserved by force of arms? Is it a vindication of the principle enunciated by Pendleton, recently the Democratic candidate for the Vice Presidency, and endorsed by his whole party, that no force of arms can prevent a State from withdrawing from the Union at its own pleasure? If the result of the late elections is a victory for these undoubted principles of "Democracy," it would be highly interesting to hear the oracles of that party declare it. Perhaps some of their Oregon organs will take the trouble to explain.

The resolutions of 1798 were given to the Democratic party in its infancy as the foundation of its creed. These resolutions affirm the right of any State or States, in case of a controversy with the General Government involving a conflict of power or authority, to choose their own mode of r[illegible]. They assert the superiority of the government of the States over the Government of the Union, and by affirming the right of the States to be the judges of infractions of the Constitution and to choose their own remedy therefor, they plainly assert the right of secession. On its principle of "Democracy" eleven States assumed to withdraw from the Union. And on this principle, Buchanan and the Northern wing of the party denied the right of the Government to employ "coercion." If the resolutions of '98 were right, the South was right in seceding from the Union, and the Northern Democracy were right in holding that the employment of force to defeat secession was unconstitutional. Now we wish to inquire if the result of the late elections is a victory for these principles? Do Democrats claim their victory in California and their gains in Pennsylvania and Ohio on those grounds? We are told that Democratic principles have triumphed; are those principles the ones we have enumerated? The resolutions of '98 and the principles logically deducible therefrom are all there is or ever has been of "Democracy," and now that that party has gained some partial advantages, will its advocates inform the people if the result is to be taken as a reaffirmance of the ancient principles of the party, —or does it mean something else? And if something else what has become of the "eternal, immutable principles" which have been glorified so much? Cannot some of the Democratic oracles let in a light upon these questions?

The Copperhead papers are still busy circulating a story in Fremont Lincoln was a "spiritualist." The Herald has made use of the story that he was constantly surrounded at the White House by spiritual mediums,—the object being to keep obliquity on his memory. The Cincinnati Enquirer recently said something to the same effect. The Evansville Journal whose editor never was unduly partial to Mr. Lincoln, notices the statement as follows:

> We do not think he was under such influence. We were in Washington when Mr. Conklin, a well known spiritual medium, arrived there, having travelled as he told us, hundreds of miles for the express purpose of making an important communication to President Lincoln. He sent a note to the President asking an interview, which the President declined, pleading want of time. Mr. Conklin strongly urged his request, and Mr. Lincoln in what we thought a half-impatient tone, finally answered that he would give him one hour on Sunday. The interview was wholly unsatisfactory to Conklin, who, we know, did not regard the President as a believer in his views.

The Herald intimates that Marshal Jacobi is a Democrat and says that we have endorsed him as a good Republican. We had no personal knowledge of Mr. Jacobi at the time of his election, and therefore knew only what he told us in regard to his views. On the evening of his election he came up to our office and in the presence of witnesses asserted that he had been and was still a Republican. We know nothing except what we learned from himself, and though it may have been a piece of folly in us to believe him, we submit that credulity in such a case is not the worst fault imaginable. There is a vice which is deserving of far severer reprehension.

The news we publish this morning gives a somewhat different aspect to the election returns. It looks now as if the Republicans had carried both Ohio and Pennsylvania. News was received by a large towns first, following a Democratic majority; but as the country districts come in they appear to put another face upon the returns. The result may be regarded as still in doubt.

A man was found dead on the 4th inst. in the Boise mining district. It is supposed from that his name was Henry C. Whitlad, as that was found written in his book. There were marks of violence upon the head, indicating that he had been murdered. In the memorandum book the address, "J. Spillman, Sublimity, Marion county, Oregon," is written.

Senator Fessenden is said to avow himself in favor of impeaching Johnson. He states that he favors it in view of its absolute necessity to the public interests, and in obedience to the well-nigh unanimous sentiment of his constituents. Mr. Fessenden's influence and labors have heretofore been the chief obstacle in the way of impeachment.

The Albany Democrat publishes the following: Just as we are going to press, a rumor has reached us of the death of General Robert E. Lee.

The Democrat probably obtained this intelligence by way of the Forks of the Santiam.

SALEM WEEKLY RECORD.—We have received the first number of this paper. It is issued from the office of the Daily Record, and makes a good appearance.

STATE ITEMS.

The Circuit Court was in session at the Dalles last week.

Another prospecting party has set out from Canyon City for the Beaver Creek country.

The Corvallis Gazette says the Evangelical Association, recently organized in this place, Rev. Mr. Crossman, pastor, are erecting a church building 30 by 45 feet, on the lots known as the Starr lots lying south of the Court House Square. An attempt was made some years ago to erect a church on these lots, by the Congregationalists.

The Mountaineer has the following: On Monday evening last a warrant was issued and placed in the hands of Deputy Sheriff Schutz, for the arrest of two men accused of robbing a cabin down the river, of about one hundred dollars worth of clothing and provisions, belonging to Mr. Lyal. Deputy Sheriff Schutz started in pursuit and soon got on their track. On arriving at Dog river he found that they had passed there on the trail going down the river. He then pushed on in a small boat to the Cascades, where he took the cars to the lower landing, then procuring another boat, himself and assistant again returned to the Oregon shore and waited by the trail until they made their appearance, when, by and with the persuasion of a double barreled shot gun and a Henry rifle, they surrendered without the least resistance. Shortly after the steamer Cascades came along when they were put aboard and safely brought to this city. They were recognized as soon as taken on the steamer as Alexander and Hargrave, two of the robbers who lately broke jail at Auburn, Baker county.

OUR SAN FRANCISCO DISPATCH.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 11.—A fire occurred shortly after ten o'clock last night in the old omnibus stable on Third street, between Howard and Folsom It spread so rapidly that it was feared the whole block would be destroyed, but the firemen by dint of unceasing labor and personal risk, succeeded in getting the fire under after the stable and adjoining buildings had been destroyed The stable was used by Dan McGlynne, street contractor. His horses were saved, but wagons, carts, harness, etc., to the value of several thousand dollars, were lost. The building was owned by Jos. O'Keif Loss $5,000. Other parties sustained losses amounting in the aggregate to $10,000 more. People living in the vicinity of the fire moved their goods out of their houses for safety. The premises fairly swarmed with thieves and it is estimated that more goods were stolen than were destroyed by the fire.

The Chief Engineer, this morning, tested a sample of hose that has been lately adopted by the New York Fire Department. The hose is known as the Benedict & Terry three-ply hose, made in New York. Two lengths of the hose was attached to an engine with a length of Dock and Fulton's Californiahose. The Fulton hose burst-ed at two hundred pounds pressure. At the second trial, Cook's burst at one hundred and ninety pounds pressure. The third trial was with all ply hose, two hundred and fifty feet, three quarter-inch nozzle. The pressure ran up to 140 pounds when one of the couplings gave way. At the fourth trial, all the ply hose, ¾ nozzle, the leather blunderbuss, was bursted at a pressure of 190. During this test a fire was built around the hose to see if it would burn, to no effect. A fifth test was made with the leather hose at present used by the department. At a pressure of 160 one of the couplings was blown off. A sixth test was made with the same hose which burst again at a pressure of 180.

The steamer Rising Star arrived in New York on the 9th with the passengers by the steamer which left here Sept. 12th, twenty days from San Francisco to New York.

There are now 19 policemen detailed to preserve the public peace on the outside lands, nearly a fourth of the entire force.

THE STATE FAIR.

[FROM OUR OWN REPORTER]

FIFTH DAY.

SALEM, Oct. 11, 1867.

The plowing match came off this morning at 9 o'clock. There were many excellent plows out I have not learned which one took the prize. [The premium list will be published.] The "I X. L." plow, recently patented by Mr. Brown of Roseburg, was much admired by some on account of its peculiar model and capacity of scouring in sticky land. It is said to keep bright in the black mud of the Umpqua. Douthit's gang plow is also an Oregon invention, and does good work. It has two plows very nicely arranged, just behind the drivers seat, where he can sit comfortably and drive his team, and by means of levers, he can raise his plows out of the ground or guide it deep or shallow as he may desire. A roguish fellow, after scrutinizing it closely, remarked that it was the "lazy man's plow, and would suit Oregonians first rate." Then there were threshers and sowers, as well as reapers and mowers of all fashions and make—besides a horse-rake, and a splendid straw-cutter, and a patent gate shutter. These improved implements are splendid examples of this wonderful and progressive age. The farmer need no longer trudge along the fresh turned furrow to wield the toilsome plow, nor stalk with measured tread across his field to sow his seed, nor swing the "weary scythe" to cut his grain, nor grasp the flail to thrash, nor stoop to rake—for the inventive genius of the age has mounted upon machinery, where he can crack his whip, and make the ox and horse relieved him of a thousand toils. There were a number of new inventions that I would be pleased to mention, but space will not permit.

At 11 o'clock A. M., the Annual Address was delivered by Mr. E. B. Dufur, a young farmer, and son of A. J. Dufur, of Multnomah county. It was very good and was delivered in a masterly manner. After the Address, a call was made for some of the 'Pioneers of Oregon,' and J. L. Parrish was invited to take the stand. He said he came to this coast 27 years ago, when there was little else in this splendid valley but fir trees and broad prairies. At that time he knew every white person on this coast—that he had lived to see the young State grow, till now, she teems with busy thousands. He spoke of the morality, intelligence and enterprise of the people of Oregon, and said we have no sluggards and beggars here, for they neither had the energy or means to bring them here. After Mr. Parrish had closed his remarks, Mr. John Minto, of Marion county, was called for and gave us a good talk.

The match game of Base Ball between the Pioneers, of Portland, and the Clackamas, of Oregon City, was one of the most exciting features of the day. It lasted for several hours and engaged the attention of hundreds of people. The game was very evenly played and drew out the best energies of the players. The "crowd" caught the spirit of the game, and often waved hats and handkerchiefs and cheered. Surely Base Ball is in the brain, (and probably fills many a one). The innings were even, but the Pioneers made 57 runs and the Clackamas but 53. So the Pioneers got the $40 premium, bat and ball.

At 1.30 P. M., the trotting for stallions, 5 miles, single dash, came off—premium, $1 50. But two horses were entered, and the winner made the five miles in 17 minutes and 21 seconds. At 3 P. M. the running for horse, mare or gelding—premium, $150—two-mile heats. There was but one contestant, so he won; time, 4:9, one heat. The horses drew large crowds, but the best class of people are least interested in them.

There were two very fine pianos and several melodeons—a splendid saddle mule in Walla Walla, a lot of very fine hosiery, manufactured at the Pacific Woolen Mills, from Oregon wool, and many more things which I do not care to mention, for there is not much merit in making up a State Fair of articles brought from other countries. The purpose of these fairs is, to encourage home manufactured pursuits.

At 4:30 P. M. the fair equestrians (three in number) rode into the corral, already surrounded by thousands to witness the pleasing spectacle. They were Miss Amanda Robbins, of Oregon City, Miss Maggie Gilchrest, of Marion, and Mrs. B. C. Hutchinson, of Lane. They all did well, but Miss Robbins carried off the blue ribbon and the prize.

The receipts at the gates alone, up to to-night, amounted to $4,220. The receipts from entries, licenses, &c., &c., I have not been able to obtain, but will forward them with the list of premiums awarded as soon as possible. P. W. G.

QUICK AND REGULAR is the rule with the Opposition Steamship Co. There is no sickness on this route, which circumstance combined with pleasant travel and good accommodation, diverts a considerable portion of the homeward bound from Panama to Nicaragua. We rejoice to see the opposition successful, for were it not for the North American Co.'s splendid line of steamers, many persons would be unable to visit their old homes, while those who go home seem from fifty to one hundred dollars the trip each way. The Moses Taylor is the next opposition boat, and she connects on the Atlantic side with the fast and favorite steamship Santiago.

So, come one, come all, and each separately be convinced of the above facts.

I have now on hand a very large collection of negatives, the names of which are recorded alphabetically in a book for that purpose that can be seen in the reception room.

A DEMOCRATIC BLOW OUT.—On Saturday the walls of our "corner groceries" were made gay by posters bearing the following message exhilarating to Democratic hearts:

"DINNA YE HEAR THE SLOGAN?!
DEMOCRATS OF MULTNOMAH!

Our noble party has beaten the enemy in three more States. Come out and celebrate the victories. Assemble at Oro Fino Hall to-night at 7 o'clock, and let us rejoice together.
J. A. CHAPMAN,
President Democratic Club."

In accordance with the above call to the faithful, the obliterated Democrats did assemble at Oro Fino Hall, and did "rejoice together," and, apparently, were "happy in their efforts." Mr Chapman, Tyrant, viz, not being present at the opening ing of the exhibition, Mr. Hallock did the honors in a "happy effort." Then Messrs Stout, Johnson and Crosin declared they were in a beatific state of happiness. Sample was happy too, and made no attempt to conceal the fact. Newby struck an "attitood" and was happy. Chapman didn't look happy, but he probably was Brown was profuse in his offers to shake hands with returning prodigal Democrats, from which it would seem he was happy, and forgiving, too, as every happy man should be. It was a success. It must not be supposed that all this inside happiness was unaccompanied by outward manifestations. Not any. The cannon was boomed muchly. The squeaking fife was squeaked terrifically The sonorous drums was sounded furiously. There was a procession, too, headed by instruments of music The procession was happy. Behind the procession which ... chol zigzagically from the west side of Stark street to the eastern boundary of the same, there were four small boys with torches. The torches were brilliant. The pro- ...sion moved up First street, and countermarched Herif through other streets to the residence of Judge Page who was happy in bed. The fife being squeaked, the Judge got up and wrapping his robe about him, went and spoke to the "crowd," in a "happy effort." The "crowd" then went down to First street, where it halted and one of the party ...inists made a happy effort. He didn't succeed He said the "crowd" were the "ghosts of Democracy." The crowd did look ghostly, in the flickering torch-light; but they didn't want to be told so. Another" processionist undertook to set the speaker right. The first speaker explained that he said "ghosts" in a metaphorical sense. He merely wished to illustrate what the Democracy was and what it is. This was satisfactory, and the "crowd" adjourned to "Bascome."

GOOD TEMPLARS' FAST DAY.—Last May the R. W. Grand Lodge of North America adopted the following preamble and resolutions:

WHEREAS, The Temperance Reform is pre-eminently a moral movement, authorized by the plainest teachings of Holy Scripture, and a large proportion of Christian people feel an interest in its success, and, whereas, like every other effort of similar character, it requires more than human wisdom for its proper direction, therefore,

Resolved, That Thursday, the 17th day of October next, be set apart as a day of humiliation, fasting and prayer, for the special blessings and guidance of Almighty God in this great work.

Resolved, That we respectfully request all Christian Ministers and Churches to unite in the proper observance of the day, by assembling at their usual places of worship, and engage in all the service as may seem to them most conducive to the spiritual design of the occasion.

In pursuance of the above, Mr. C. Beal, the G. W. C. T. of the jurisdiction of Oregon, has issued the following proclamation:

To the Members of the Independent Order of Good Templars of the State of Oregon and Washington Territory.

Dear Brothers and Sisters: Your attention is called to the resolutions of the Right Worthy Grand Lodge of North America and the action of the Right Grand Worthy Templar thereon, in relation to a day of humiliation, fasting and prayer as published above During the past year the Temperance cause has met with unparalleled success; love and law have carried our holy cause on from conquering to conquest. In the lodge room, in the open society, in the church, on the platform, in the Constitutional Convention, in the Legislature, at the polls, before the people and in the Capital of our Nation there has been no BACKWARD STEP. Let us "thank God and take courage."

I therefore call upon Thursday the 17th day of October, ...ng as a day of humiliation, fasting and prayer, for our ...ister And when this proclamation does not reach a ...dge in due time, I would recommend that such lodge, on its motion, select a suitable day therefor.

Hoping that these solemn services may be conducted in Faith, Hope and Charity, I remain your brother,
In fraternal bonds,
C. BEAL, G. W. C. T.

FRUIT FAIRY.—Mr. W. Kohlhauff of Walla Walla, called at our office on Saturday, having just arrived, and presented us with several specimens of apples, pears and peaches, grown in the Walla Walla valley—some of them from Mr. A. B. Roberts and others from Mr. Van Hennick. Mr. Roberts formerly lived in this city and emigrated to Walla Walla at a time when there was not a fruit tree growing in all that country, except a few seedlings at the old Whitman mission. He writes in a private note that the specimens sent are a fair average of their kind in his orchard. Of the apples sent, the Blue Pearmain and Rambo, were very fine large specimens, larger than the average in this valley. The pears were of good size, but with one exception were not ripe enough for fair criticism. The Bosket was large; the Flemish Beauty was ripe and delicious. The peaches and nectarines were seedlings, large in size and of better flavor than the seedlings of the Willamette valley. We understood Mr. Kohlhauff to say that some of the apples had taken premiums at the late Walla Walla fair. One of them, a beautiful, large Alexander, sported the second premium badge. By the bye, Friday evening, we received from Phillip Ritz a box of peaches, name unknown to us; but we must acknowledge them to be a little the most luscious fruit we have tasted this season. We thank our Walla Walla friends for their kind remembrance.

DEPUTY MARSHAL.—Marshal Jacobi, on Saturday appointed as his deputies Joseph Sloan and James Parlow. These two receive each a salary of $100 per month. Jas. Bothwell, H. M. Hudson and Phillip Saunders were also appointed deputies, assigned to special beats. The latter get their pay out of fees and private subscriptions from citizens on their several beats. All these appointments have been approved by the Mayor.

MOVEMENT.—A considerable portion, if not all, the machinery of the Salem Oil Mill, arrived by the steamship Sierra Nevada. It is quite out of the ordinary style of machinery as to shape and, while it lay on the wharf excited a great deal of curiosity. It goes up this morning on the Alert. The Sierra Nevada also brought new machinery for the Salem Woolen Mills and a lot of quartz machinery for Idaho.

DALLAS PUBLIC SCHOOL.—The report of J. D. Robb, Principal of the Dallas Public School, September 30th, ... the following: Higher Department, 20 males, 17 ... Inter. Dista Department, 24 males, 19 females. Second Primary Department, 28 males, 18 females. First Primary Departments, 36 males, 23 females. Total in all departments, 120. Daily average attendance, 106.

THE STEAMER CARE AT MONTICELLO.—It will be recollected that a week or two ago, a stabbing case occurred between two stage drivers, at Monticello. The person inflicting the wound was arrested, had a examination before a justice of the peace and was discharged. The discharge of the man gave great dissatisfaction to many and, it is now said, an appeal will be taken to the District Court.

SALE OF REAL ESTATE.—At the executor's sale, on Saturday of lots belonging to the estate of C. N. Hamilton, by A. B. Richardson Auctioneer, the following prices were obtained:

North half, lot 2 in block 74, $2,900; north half lot 3 in same block, $1,860; lot 5 in block 109, $600; lot 6 in same block, $720; south half of lot 4 in block 74, $2,500

STRAY FENCE-POSTS.—We noticed on the wharf, Saturday, a lot of stone fence-posts, marked to J. C. R., Salem. They are cut in monument shape, from old red sand-stone, and, though plain, are quite handsome. We suppose, from the initials, that they are for John C. Ball, and that they are intended for a fence in front of his residence—one of the handsomest in the city.

SCOW SUNK.—A scow, belonging to Mr. Grounds, was sunk at Cathalmet, last Wednesday night. At low tide, one corner floated under the wharf, and when the tide rose, the water rushed in and the scow sunk, being loaded with near one hundred cords of green wood. The scow was broken in two, and that and the wood will be nearly a total loss.

GOOD RATE.—The steamer on which Senators Williams and Corbett, left San Francisco for New York, also took Mr J. Balling and wife, Major Eckerson and family, and several others of Oregon. J. Ross Browne and family were also passengers.

BURIAL.—Mr. Martin L. Blumenthal who died in this city on Friday, was buried yesterday, being followed to his last resting place by members of both the Odd Fellows' lodges, the Germania Society and the Hebrew Benevolent Society. The procession was an imposing one.

PERSONAL.—Mr. M. Baker, of LaGrande called on us last evening. He represents the mining prospects of Eastern Oregon as decidedly good. He thinks Eagle creek will yet be proved one of the richest mining camps in the northern mining region. Mr Baker leaves this morning for home.

FREIGHTS.—The Sierra Nevada brought up about six hundred and fifty tons freight, and the California brought two hundred tons for Portland, the balance of her cargo, about one hundred and fifty tons, being for Victoria.

FESTIVAL.—The ladies of the Baptist church will hold a festival Wednesday evening, the 16th, probably at Mountaintes' hall, the proceeds to be devoted to the finishing of the church building at the corner of Alder and Fourth streets

WILLAMETTE FREIGHTS.—Arrived per steamer Alert on Saturday the 12th, 27 half bbls dried fruit, 9 boxes eggs, 2 cows, 2 coops chickens, 50 bags feed, 2 bales mdse, 80 ... sacks flour, 19 boxes assorted fruit and 7 bales woolen goods

COMING HOME.—Among the passengers who sailed from New York in the steamer of the 1st, we notice the names of Geo. A. Niles and wife of Salem, and Mrs E M Barnum, formerly of Salem

COLORED MASONS.—We are informed that steps have been taken to organize, in this city, a lodge of colored Masons, and that a new hall is now being fitted up on Alder street

OFF FOR MONTANA.—Our friend J. G. Chapman starts this morning for Virginia City, Montana, on professional business He will be absent about six weeks

TO SAIL.—The steamship Sierra Nevada, Wm Metzger, Commander, will sail for San Francisco on Tuesday, at 5 o'clock P. M.

TREASURE RECEIPT.—The treasure to Wells, Fargo & Co., on Saturday, from Idaho and the Upper Columbia, amounted to $41,000.

U. S. CIRCUIT COURT.—This court, Judge Deady presiding, will convene this morning, after a recess of a week.

SAILED.—The steamship California sailed for Victoria at 5 o'clock last evening

THE CAUSE.—It has been ascertained that the demonstration on Saturday night was not owing to the news of the Democratic victories, but to the fact that Barman Bros received on Saturday an immense stock of Clothing by the steamers, which they are selling at marvelously low prices.

FOR ASTORIA.—The steamer Ranger, Capt Fisher, will make a trip to Astoria on Wednesday next and return on the day following. d2t

The Montana Trade.

SPOKANE RIVER, Sept. 20, 1867.

EDITOR OREGONIAN.

It is said, and truthfully, too, that competition is the life of trade. Taking this for granted, would it not be well for the people of your city, and not it alone, but the entire Pacific coast, to put forth an effort to secure a good portion of the Montana trade. Other portions of the country are strenuously endeavoring to divert the trade into other channels, which do not benefit us in the least. Now, from our proximity to these mines, we, unquestionably, could command a reasonable share of that trade, provided a little energy be spent in the right direction. Cheap freights and an extended river carriage will accomplish it. The time is now at hand for our business men to devise a plan to bring this about. A good wagon road is needed to connect the Columbia river with Pen d'Oreille Lake, where steamboats are already built to carry any amount of freight, as it were, almost into the mining regions. Now, to secure this desirable object, let your business men project some plan and lay it before your Senators, Messrs. Williams and Corbett, and I know from a conversation I had with our delegate, Mr. Flanders, that he will heartily co-operate in this important undertaking, to secure an appropriation for the furtherance of this great scheme. It is a fact that cannot be gainsayed, that we can lay freight down as cheap to Helena and Missoula as it can be brought from the other side of the mountains. But to do this, teaming will have to be resorted to, and a good wagon road is indispensable. The magnitude of the work is too great to be accomplished by private enterprise, or even by a company. Government aid is wanted. Let some judicious, practical man superintend it. It is true there has been money enough, and more than sufficient, spent to make the Mullan road, but it was badly managed and indiscreetly thrown away, because it was thought no person could build such a road except he be a military man. This is the secret of its non-success. The road was made to cross the Coeur d'Alene mountain, where it could not be used but about six months of the year. There was money enough spent, on the bridges alone, to make the entire road on the route contemplated by your correspondent. I said this money was virtually thrown away. So it was, as there are comparatively few of the bridges remaining at this time.

This is not all; the road was laid over marshes and swamps that are almost impassable (excepting during a few of the summer months), before it reaches the mountains. There is a stretch of about thirty-two miles that is little better than a quagmire. It courses through low cedar swamps, and can never be made a good and practicable road where it is now laid. Consequently, I say, let us have a new survey and a new route; then, with a good practical man to direct the work, something may be done. I say, too, not a military man. I do not wish to disparage the work of the military; but their forte is not in the line of road-making; they are good enough in their places, and there I wish to keep them. I have witnessed enough of their making roads in Oregon. Take a glance, for instance, at the road from Yamhill to Astoria ($20,000 appropriation), and the Myrtle Creek road in Southern Oregon. These roads were constructed under the superintendence of the military. The money was spent and no roads made. I always questioned the utility of the former. The latter, I believe, was intended for Gen. Joe Lane's benefit. It had neither beginning nor end to it.

To return to the subject. This proposed pass will, without doubt, be the route of the North Pacific railroad. The making of this road, too, would have a tendency to direct the attention of capitalists to this route for a railroad. It would assist very materially in carrying the work forward when it shall have been once commenced. The one would be a handmaid to the other. That there will be a North Pacific railroad, I verily believe. But until such a work shall be completed, let us have a thoroughfare for present purposes. The delay has been too great already. The work is a necessity. Every year it is delayed, the greater the loss to the business community on this side of the mountains, and the greater the difficulty in getting it started. Your correspondent cannot say what point on the Columbia river would be the most feasible to start from. The White Bluffs, perhaps, presents the fewest obstacles, and it is said to be much the smoothest road of any connecting the Columbia river with the Pen d'Oreille lake. I have not been over it, however, and cannot speak advisedly. I have traveled over all the other roads, and do not think any of them very good without considerable outlay. But let us secure the appropriation, then locate the road.

I have extended this article much longer than I at first intended, but I hope you will pardon me in this instance. If I write you again, I shall endeavor to be more brief. If any thing turns up worthy of note, you may hear ag in from

☞ We have but little confidence in the trumpet tongued statements of the proprietors of advertised medicines generally, but we are forced to concur in the opinion, uniformly expressed by all who have used PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER, that it is a very valuable article, and one that it would be well for every household to have at hand, in case of bruises, scalds, burns, diarrhœa, dysentery, cholera, fever and ague, and the host of diseases, external and internal, which it is adapted to cure or alleviate No article of medicine ever attained to such unbounded popularity and extensive diffusion. It has penetrated to every part, even the most remote, of the known world, bearing with it its healing influences more potent than those of the spices of "Araby the blest." We are informed by our principal druggists, that they sell more of this article for exportation than any or all others, and that the demand is constantly increasing.—Salem Observer.

An Empty Sleeve.

By the moon's pale light to the gazing throng,
Let me tell one tale, let me sing one song;
'Tis a tale devoid of an aim or plan—
'Tis a simple song of a one-armed man.
Till this very hour I could not believe,
What a tell-tale thing is an empty sleeve!
What a weird, queer thing is an empty sleeve!

It tells in a silent tone to all
Of a country's need and a country's call,
Of a sweet kiss for child and wife,
And a hurried march for a country's life.
Till this very hour who could ever believe,
What a tell-tale thing is an empty sleeve?
What a weird, queer thing is an empty sleeve!

It tells of a battle and fields of gore,
Of the saber's clash, of the cannon's roar,
Of the deadly charge, of the bugle's note,
Of a gurgling sound in a foeman's throat;
Of the whizzing grape, of the fiery shell,
Of a scene which mimics the scene of hell.
Till this very hour who could ever believe,
What a tell-tale thing is an empty sleeve?
What a weird, queer thing is an empty sleeve!

Though it points to a myriad of wounds and scars,
Yet it tells of a flag of stripes and stars,
In God's own chosen time will take
Each place of the "rag" with the rattlesnake,
And it points to a time when that flag shall wave
O'er a land where breathes no cowering slave.
To the top of the skies, then, let us all heave
One proud huzza for the empty sleeve—
For the one-armed man and the empty sleeve.

Queen Victoria and Mr. Brown—The London Scandal.

London is the center of England. The Queen is the center of London. Her presence is the light of the aristocracy—her absence their sorrow. Her going out and coming in—her down sitting and uprising—when and where she walks or rides—how she dresses—to whom she speaks—who attends her—are carefully noted and greedily read. After thirty years of a model domestic fame traveling round the globe, and herself the idol of the British public, an American is astonished to find the London atmosphere full of a scandal; the name of the highest lady in the land connected with one of her lowest subjects, the names of the "Queen and Mr. Brown" on the lips of all classes, from the rag-picker in the street to the peer in the realm. The Queen is seldom seen in London. She flits back and forth from Windsor Castle only to meet the Lords of State. She seldom sleeps at Buckingham Palace, her town residence. She likes the retreat at Windsor, and lives near the room where the Prince Consort breathed his last. The solitude of the Isle of Wight is a favorite with her, for she can ride twenty miles in her own dominion without being seen. Among the Highlands at Balmoral she lays off the Queen and plays the woman. Driving around in a low wheeled carriage to which is attached a runt of a pony, she visits the sick, the infirm and the poor. Her carriage is loaded with comforts which she distributes with her own hand. Her coming to any house is a benediction. All this the Londoners dislike. They pay for the pomp and show of royalty and they want it. They give the Queen a salary of $5,000 a day in gold. They furnish the palace, her state carriages and her hundred horses, the plate for royal banquets, and also pay for the entertainment of all royal guests. Her refusal to join in the gaieties of life—the closing of the palaces and her refusals to play the Queen deeply offend the Londoners. It harms trade they say, and the sufferings of the poor for want of employment are laid at the Queen's door. Ministers

WHO IS MR. BROWN?

Mr. Brown is the Queen's confidential servant. Her Majesty found him at Balmoral. On her first visit to that castle after she became a widow, she found a servant silent, sad and obsequious, very attentive, very efficient, a man who seldom spoke a word. On inquiry she found that this man had been a servant long in the employ of Prince Albert. He enjoyed the confidence of the Prince. His mourning for his late master had been the talk of the castle. The Queen took him at once into her employ, and it is said into her affection. Being a Highlander he came into the presence of Her Majesty in full costume, that is, with bare legs, to the great scandal of the full dressed lackeys of the palace. From step to step Brown came up till he has become the prime minister of the Queen's household. All her orders go through him. His body guard are Highlanders also. And the oldfund between the Scotch and the English is resived in the Queen's presence. All sorts of stories were started and are still in circulation. At one time it was reported that she would marry Brown if she had to abdicate. The Queen is known to be a spiritualist, upon which it is said that she believes the spirit of Prince Albert to be in this man. All possible influences have been brought to bear to remove him from the Queen's person. She is well aware of the scandal connecting her name with Brown's, but she will not yield one jot. To the impassioned expostulations of her ministers she replied by an imperious wave of her hand, which induced the ministers to back out and depart.

HOW BROWN LOOKS.

Wherever you find the Queen there you will find Brown. He is a shrewd Scotchman, who knows there is no power behind the throne that can touch him. He is a coarse, common looking sort of fellow with iron-gray hair. He is about fifty years of age, nervous and wiry, with quite a stoop in his gait, coarse hard features, which make him look like a soldier or a ditcher dressed up, and quite uncomfortable in his nice clothes. He is about as unattractive looking a person as any day laborer you will find about our wharves. He is nervous, busy, meddlesome, but he attends strictly to his duties. He seems to know nothing, and certainly seems to care nothing for the detestation in which he is held by the servants of the Queen, and the nation at large.

HOW QUEEN AND BROWN ON CANVAS.

The opening of the Royal Academy at London for the season is a great event. The aristocracy attend the opening. An extra charge is made the first day and all London goes because there is a jam. At the opening in May last a genuine sensation was produced. A picture excited the attention of all comers. Crowds hung around it through the whole day. The picture occupied one side of an apartment. It was a superb life-size likeness of Victoria. The scene is laid at Osborn. She is represented in a close fitting habit, and robed wholly in black, as usual, her widow's cap being hidden under her hat. She is mounted on an elegant horse and is represented as reading a dispatch, while a letter fallen from her hand lies on the ground. In the foreground, at the head of her horse stands the noted Brown, as complete a likeness as was ever drawn of mortal man. He is represented in his Highland costume. He was put in the prominent position that he now occupies, it is said, by order of the Queen. I was present when the Academy was opened and this picture first exhibited. The room in which it hangs was crowded with nobility and the elite of London. It was known that a grand likeness of the Queen was to be the leading feature of the Exhibition. All were on tiptoe to behold this great work of art. But no one knew that Mr. Brown was to be exhibited also. When the curtain was rolled up there was an insensible howl of indignation. Some ladies actually covered their faces. "It's Brown! it's Brown! what a shame!" was heard all round. Threats were made to cut Brown's head out of the canvas, and it will be done if the people have a chance. Crowds surrounded the picture all the time, as people will look at a disagreeable object, and this picture is highly offensive to the Queen's subjects.

THE REAL FACTS ABOUT MR. BROWN.

The Queen can have no society. No subject can speak to her without her permission. She is as isolated as the statute of Nelson on the top of the column at Trafalgar Square. On the death of the Prince, who had done all the business of the State, she found herself alone with the kingdom and an immense household to take care of. She could get nothing done. Her orders had to run through a dozen or twenty hands. The royal servants have a routine out of which they will not go, even for the Queen. It takes about twenty to do one man's work. The servant who opens one door will not open the next. The one who brings a pitcher of water will not fill the glass. The Queen found in Brown a prompt, able and attentive servant. She gave him full charge of her domestic arrangements. If she wishes to ride or walk, have a carriage or a railroad train, her orders go through Brown. He is attentive and obsequious, but is an excellent business man. One of the Queen's characteristics is promptness. She exacts this of her servants, and Brown meets this exactly. He attends the Queen in all her journeys. He presides over that portion of Windsor Castle appropriated as the Queen's residence. Into it none of the royal servants enter without his permission. He has more influence over the Queen than any living man in the kingdom, and he will hold his position while the Queen holds hers. But he is thoroughly detested by all the household. Very little he cares for that.

BROWN AT THE RAILWAY STATION.

The coming and going of the Queen from Windsor is heralded in the court paper. All London goes to see the arrival or departure. She has a special train to herself. A right royal train it is. It consists of three coaches, an engine elegantly adorned, and a pilot engine that goes before. Nothing is allowed on the track while the royal train is running in or out. Twenty minutes before the train leaves London nothing is allowed to start from Windsor. Nothing leaves London till the signal is given that the Queen has reached the royal station at her castle.

It costs the Queen $500 for the round trip, which she pays out of her own pocket every time the train runs from Windsor to London and back. Over this train Mr. Brown exercises supreme control. In the presence of hundreds of people who gather in and about the station to witness the royal sight, Brown enters the middle coach, to be occupied by his Royal mistress, and examines everything to see it is all right. He stands on the crimson carpet stretching from the outer door to the Queen's coach. He looks steadily into the eyes of the crowd who are kept back by the railing and by the police, and does so with the look of a servant of the lower class, yet with as shrewd and "canny" a look as any Scotchman who ever crossed the border. His quick ear catches the sound of the advancing cortege. The Queen's train starts at half after five. It is twenty-seven minutes after five and Her Majesty has not appeared. Said the officer who stood beside me on the crimson carpet, in answer to my question, "Is not the Queen late?"—"Do you see that clock? It is now twenty nine minutes past five. In half a minute those doors will open, the Queen will enter, take her seat, the whistle will sound and the train be in motion half after, precisely." Sure enough, at the exact moment mentioned the doors were thrown open, the Queen, headed by Brown, entered. A short, thick set, German-looking woman she was, dressed wholly in black, followed by her younger children and the ladies of her household. She walked with a sharp, imperious tread, looking neither to the right nor to the left. Brown handed her into the coach. The doors went to with a slam. Brown gave signal and disappeared in one of the apartments. The train moved on the exact minute, amid faint cheers to the Queen and loud execrations on "Brown."

Stewart and the War.

At the breaking out of the war there was about $2,000,000 due from southern merchants to Mr. Stewart, the great dry goods jobber of New York. The fact that the great body of traders of the south took advantage of the state of hostilities to repudiate their indebtedness to the north is well known. "We intend to keep your funds to fight your northern hordes with," was the response of many a chivalrous southron to a polite request from his creditors that he would walk up to the Captain's office and settle. There were a few honorable exceptions of men who paid their northern indebtedness to the last farthing. Others who had the means were disposed to pay, but desired to discriminate between the northern loyalists and the scoundrels who had naturally been transformed by the event of the war into a fiery copperhead. Creditors of the latter stripe might hope to get their pay, some time or another, but loyal men would have to whistle for theirs. Among the traders of the south, of the class last alluded to, was the well-known Memphis firm of Speed, Donoho & Strange. This firm was largely indebted to Mr. Stewart, and they were abundantly able to pay, and even willing to, provided he could prove that he was "sound on the goose." But on this point, it seems, they had strong misgivings, and with good reason too, for it was currently reported that, at the time of the threatened attack on Washington, Mr. Stewart had offered $1,000,000 to Government for its defense. So one of the firm wrote to Mr. S., catechising him upon the subject. For himself he said he could not believe the report, but, inasmuch as it was the intention of his firm, immediately upon the cessation of hostilities, to meet all their liabilities, save to those who sought to "make the south bow in submission to their dictates," he was anxious to know exactly where Mr. Stewart stood with regard to the war. This is the substance of the letter. Mr. Stewart's reply was what might have been expected from a man of high-toned loyalty. Whatever, he said, might be the course of the Memphis firm, or of others at the south, it should not change his course. All that he held of position and wealth he owed to the free institutions of the United States, and he was ready to sacrifice all, and, if need be, his life, in upholding the flag of his country. This avowal, of course, threw Mr. Stewart outside of the list of the preferred creditors of the Memphis firm; and yet he lost nothing by his frankness—perhaps he fared even better than many a cringing Copperhead creditor of the same firm—for, keeping a vigilant watch over affairs at Memphis, he was enabled at the close of the war to secure every farthing due him from Messrs. Speed, Donoho & Strange.

There was once a very illiterate gentleman—one Peter Patterson—appointed as justice of the peace. The first day his clerk handed him a duplicate writ.

"Well, what am I to do with it?" was the inquiry.

"Nothing but to sign your initials," was the reply.

"My nickels—what are they?"

"Why, two P's," replied the clerk, getting impatient.

Cold perspiration stood out upon the forehead of the unhappy magistrate, and he seized a pen, and, with desperation in his face, wrote, "Too pete."

A man and wife were sitting at breakfast, the other day—the husband trying to read the paper, while the wife was lecturing him on his dissipated hours. He suddenly looked up from his paper and said:

"Here's a perfectly correct sentiment. A writer in this paper says, the best capital to begin life with is a capital wife."

"That's very true, dear, replied the wife, smiling, thinking that her remark would elicit a compliment, "but where can you always get them?"

"In the deaf and dumb asylum, of course."

As sympathetic novelists say, "we will not further invade this sense or quiet domesticity."

There is a place near Boston usually regarded as in rather a decaying condition. A gentleman spending the summer there, recently remarked to a visitor:

"I don't know what people mean by calling H——— a slow town. I hire this house of a man who has gone West on a wedding tour. He is eighty-seven years old, and his bride is the second wife he has had since he was eighty."

have plead with her to meet the public demand. Punch has lampooned her with his most effective sarcasm. A less worthy retirement is soon attributed to the Queen than grief for the Prince Consort. In print and in speech she is accused of being in love with Mr. Brown. It is openly said that she has transferred her affection for the Prince Consort to this gentleman.

General Meagher, at the time of his death, was preparing a series of papers for Harper's Monthly called "Rides in Montana." By Col. Cornelius O'Keefe, late of the Irish Brigade." The October number of Harper's will contain the first and last installment.

BUTTONS.—At a church collection for missions, the preacher said: "My Christian brethren, let us caution those that put in buttons not to break off the eyes; it spoils them for use, and they will not pass among the heathen for coin."

Every plous New Bedford citizen prays when a whaler sails that she may be like the widow's cruse, and return full of oil.

What one cow asked another: "What cud you be thinking of?" Answer: "Upon whatever I chews."

☞ BRONCHITIS OR CHRONIC SORE THROAT—It is attended with irritation of the bronchial tubes, which convey the air we breathe into the lungs. This irritation produces sore throat, hoarseness, coughing, and sometimes spitting of matter streaked with blood. If it is neglected it will extend down to the lungs, and settle into confirmed consumption. ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM will be found a most valuable remedy for curing this disease, and prevent its running into Consumption.—Sold by dealers in family medicines generally.
